

How to Trigger Primary Motivation for Learning in Low Educated Adults Using ICT Tools

The project is meant to empower adult educators offering them and constructing with them knowledge and skills needed for working with low- educated and low-skilled adult learners wanting to trigger their primary motivation for learning.

To this end, different motivational strategies, methods and techniques will be surveyed, collected, and offered to adult educators, asking them to test and evaluate them in adult educational centres in their respective countries.

Main results:

-  Open educational platform containing interactive resources for adult educators and other practitioners.
-  Collection of national studies and online resources on literacy, motivation, teaching and learning strategies
-  Compilation of good practices in the field of teaching basic skills to different groups of adult with low educational levels
-  Online interactive handbook of already existing motivational strategies used by adult educators working with low-educated and skilled adult learners
